

WILLIAM ING/Tribune-Herald

Legendary performer Jesse Colin Young, now a Kona resident, launches into a passionate rendition of "La Bamba," a Ritchie Valens hit from the 1950s, accompanied by Vito Truglio on bass. Young's appearance closed out Saturday's all-day Tsunami Aid Concert at the Kress Building, to benefit the American Red Cross International Relief fund. Numerous Big Island bands and musical artists gave their time and talents, and donations and a silent auction garnered some $12,750 in aid funds, not counting the tally for a nighttime aid show at Uncle Mikey's Nightclub in the Waiakea Villas.

WILLIAM ING/Tribune-Herald

Guitarist Ken Cameron, who organized the aid concert, introduces daughters, Sarah, 10, and Bryonie, 4, to Connections Public Charter School students Jaiden Butler, center, Clare Allen and Lani Hulse, who were soliciting donations at the door. The three girls helped collect some $2,000 in donations before they were relieved.